

Boiboi and the Great Cherry Day

Written and Illustrated By C.J Soli

Dedicated to my family who had encouraged me to write this book.

It is finally the day that Boiboi has been waiting for, the Great Cherry Day!

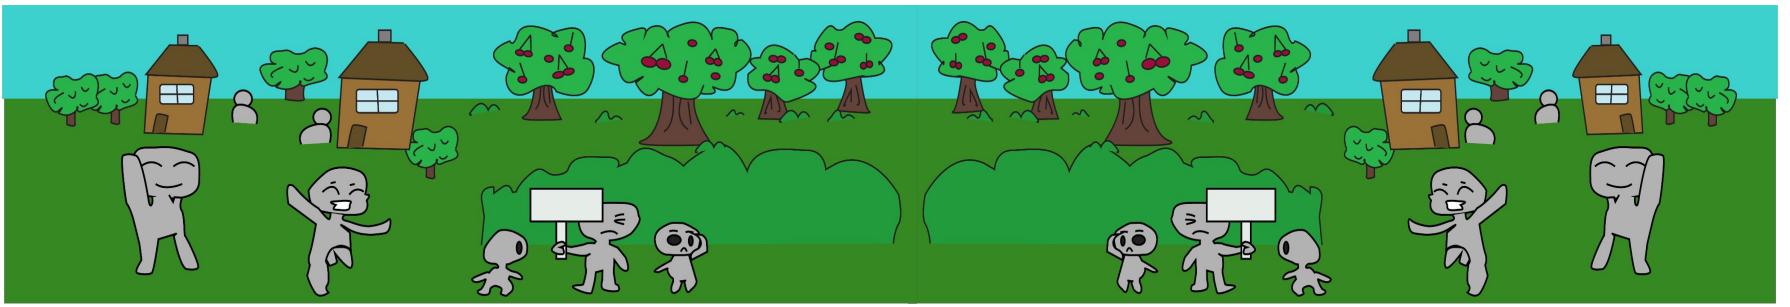

Boiboi walks out into the village that is pumped up and ready to celebrate. He suddenly comes across a few young chibis who are unaware of the special day.

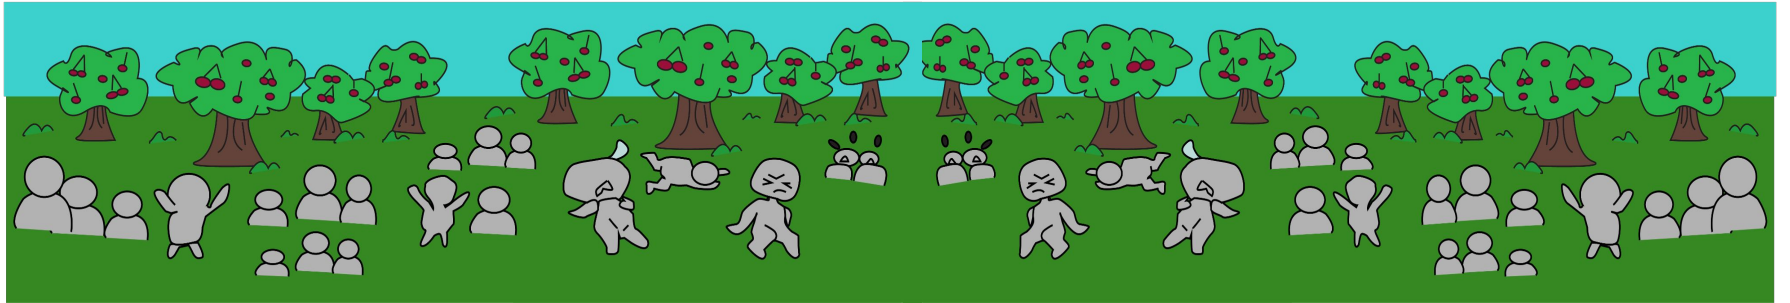

"What is going on?" asked one young-chibi.

"It is Cherry Day!" Boiboi exclaims, grabbing the attention of more chibis. He is now surrounded by the young ones as he recounts the history of the Cherry Day Celebration.

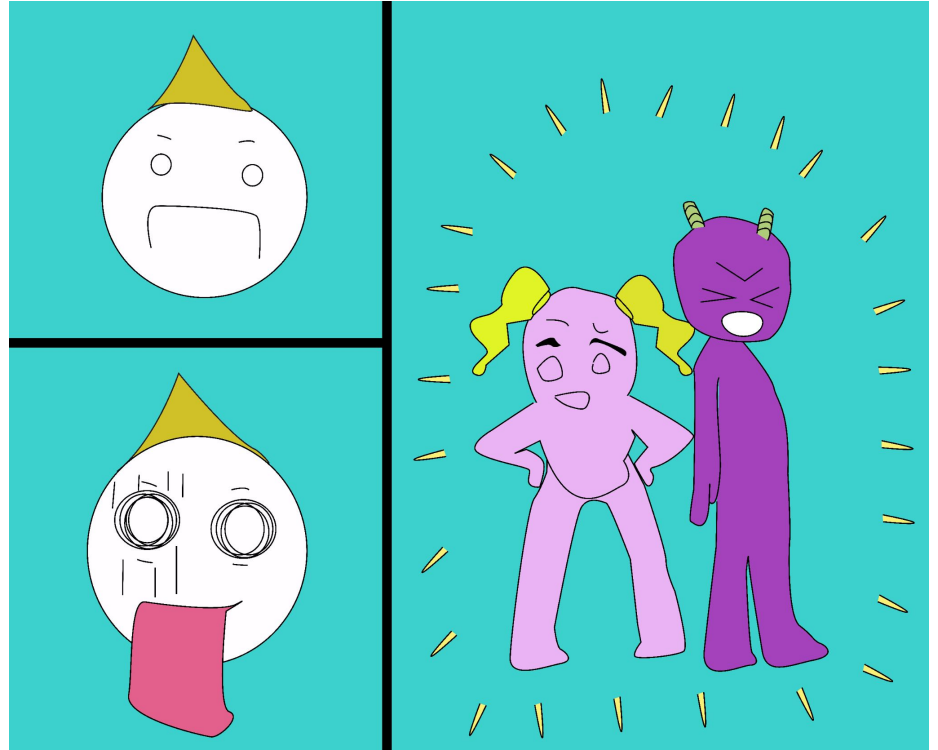

The birth of the celebration began with a forest, then to building shelters, and eventually a small village. The chibis had settled with their lives but were on empty tummies and in dire need of food.

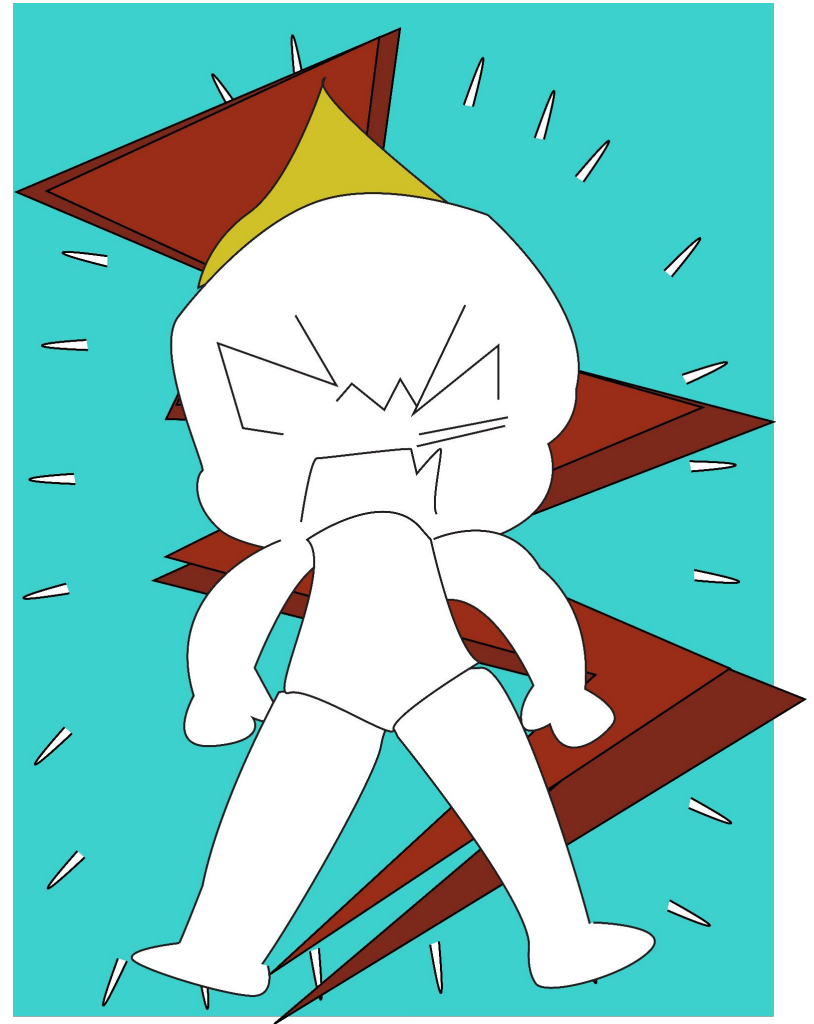

The hunger of the chibis led them to the discovery of the cherry trees. From the cherry trees, fell a big cherry that tasted so delicious they decided to celebrate it. This led to a day now known as 'The Great Cherry Day'.

Boiboi suddenly catches the sight of his two rivals, Penny and Ham.

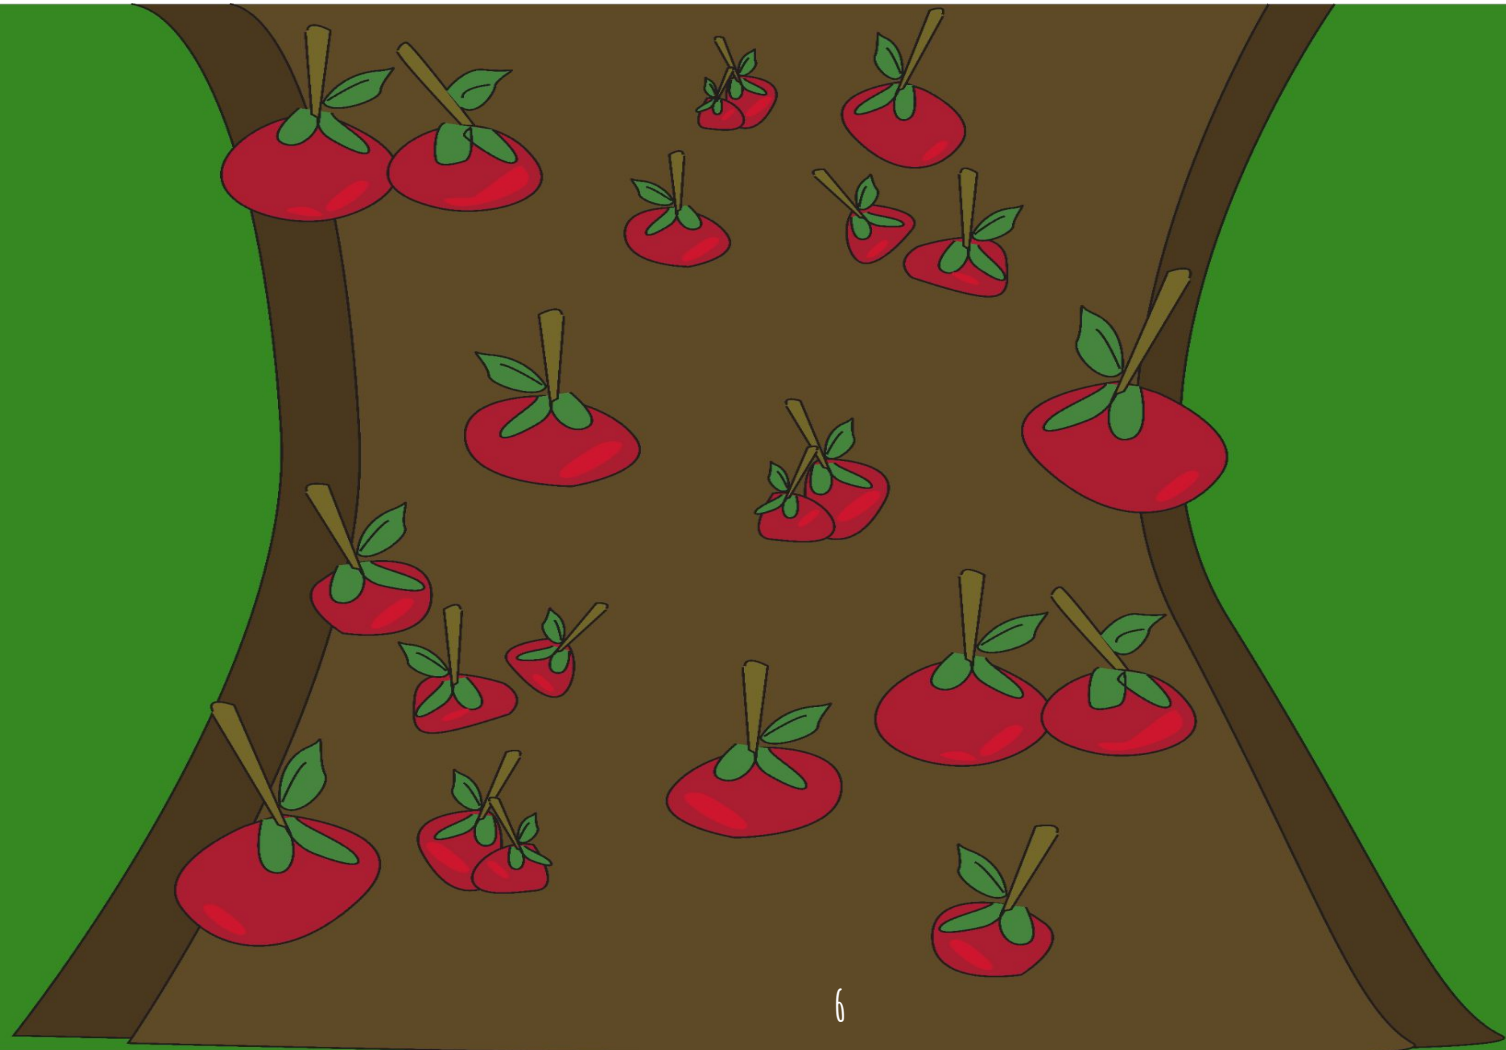

Penny is a pink, smart chibi who is never wrong. Ham is a purple chibi who always frowns, and together they are the all-time cherry race winners.

This is Boiboi's chance-to finally beat Penny and Ham.

Penny and Ham have yet again entered the race, followed by Boiboi. All three are now officially competing in the Great Cherry Race.

The time has finally come. Boiboi, Penny and Ham are at the starting line right in front of the cherry tree with chibis of the village watching and cheering for them.

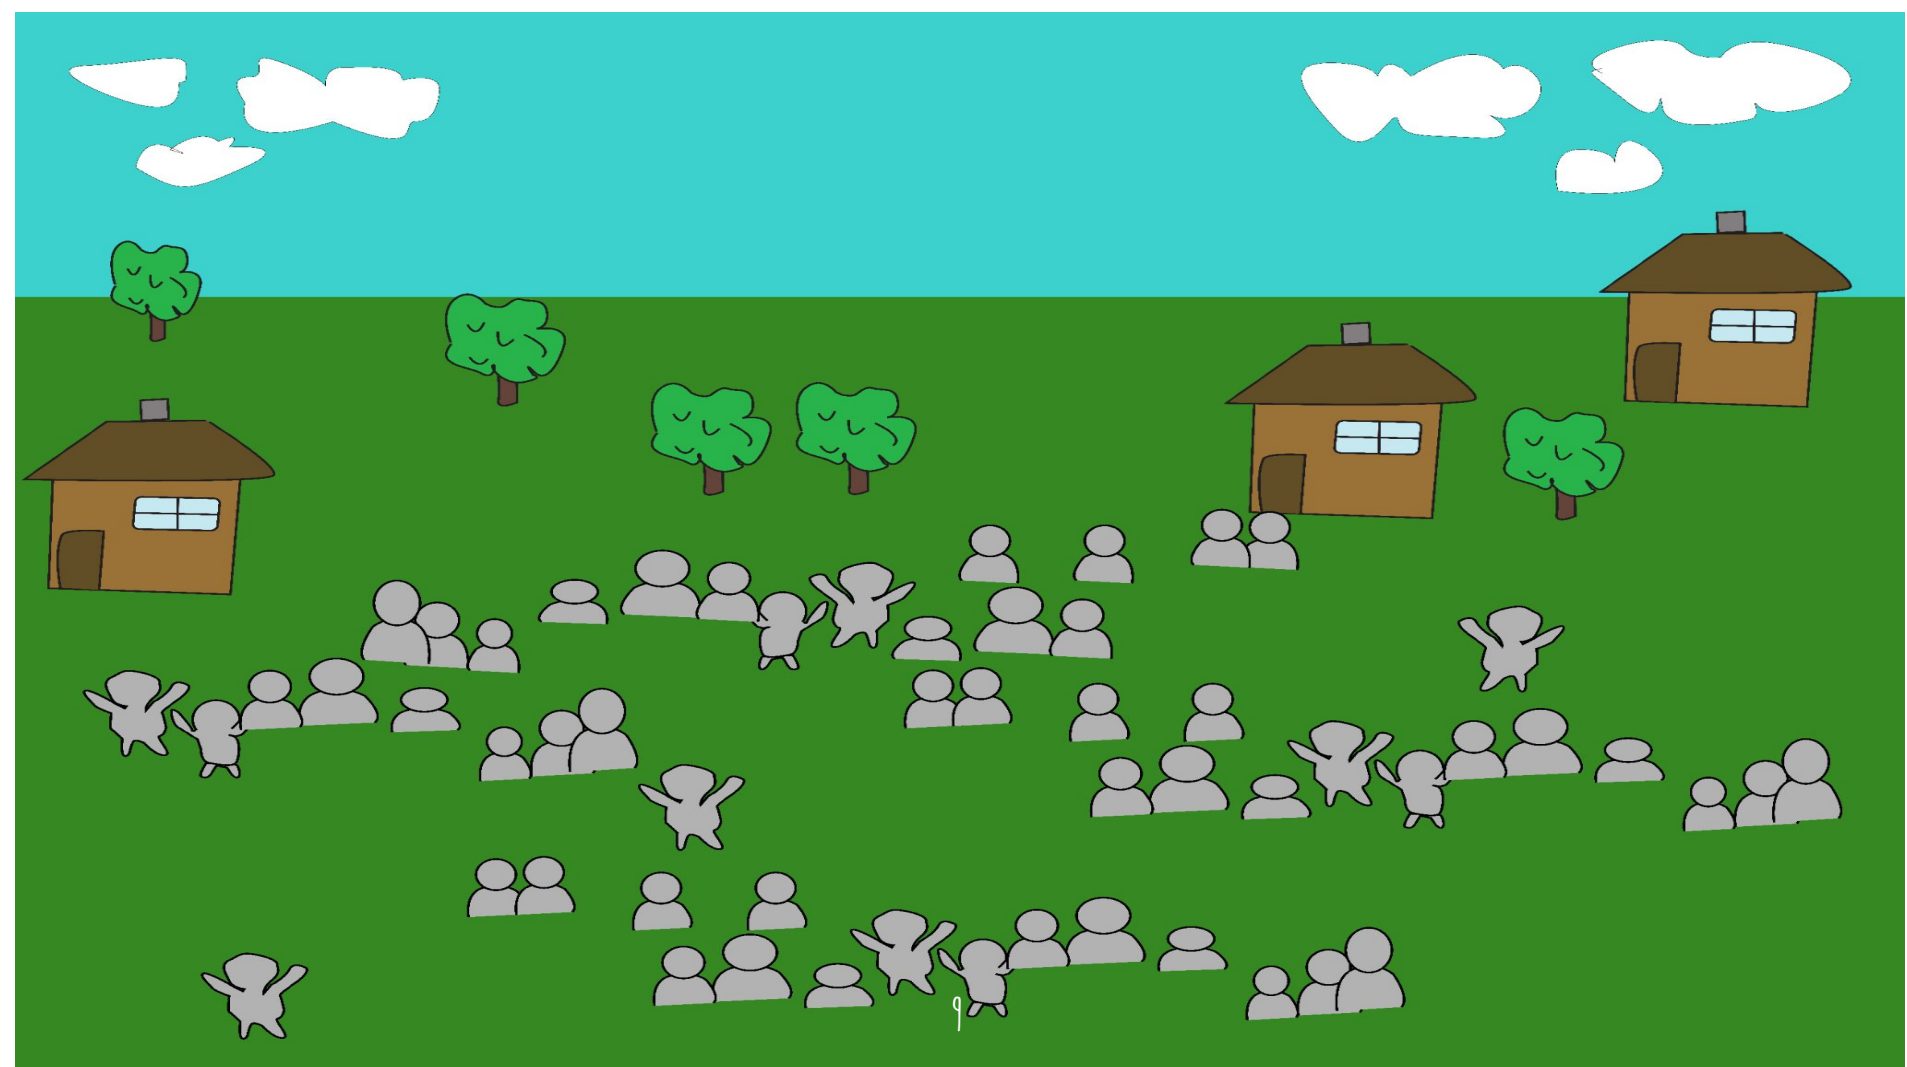

"On your mark. Get Set. Go!" Yelled a chibi.
Everyone starts cheering excitedly.

Some cheered for Penny and Ham, others cheered on Boiboi.

They ran as fast as they could, avoiding the mini cherries and kept their eyes out for the bigger cherry.

Eventually...

the three competitors come to a halt when they catch sight of the big cherry that is just inches away.

In less than a minute Boiboi, Penny and Ham are all together clutching onto the biggest, reddest and juiciest cherry ever. This initiates a fight between the three chibis.

They all become very aggressive and start tugging onto the cherry intensely.

And then... the cherry slowly
cracks and breaks!

The three chibi rivals can't believe what just happened. What have they done?

Everyone is shocked, the big cherry is now on the ground in pieces. It is a sad moment that happened so fast. All the chibis get upset and leave.

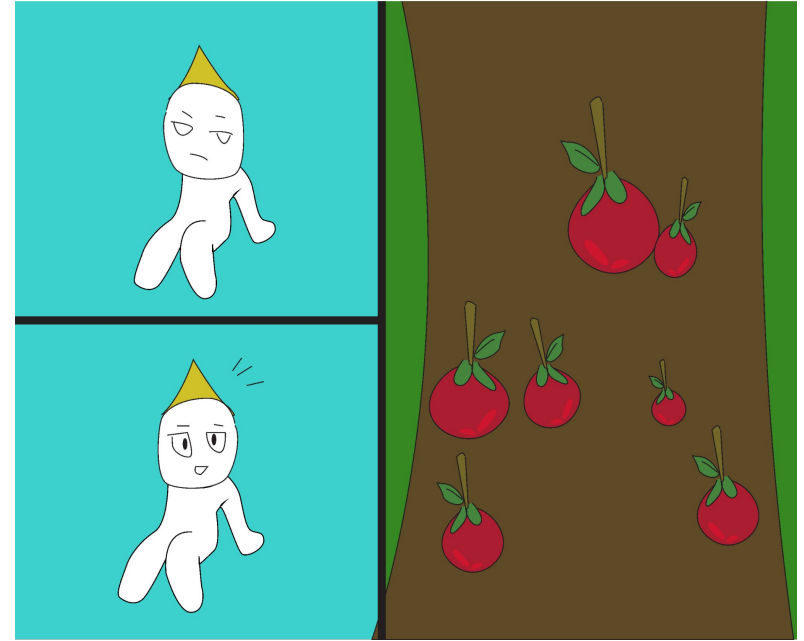

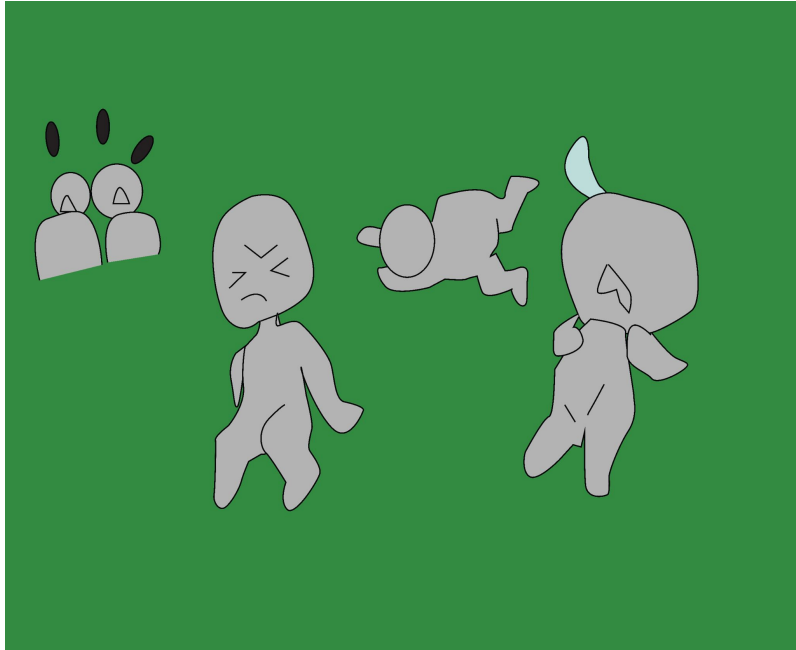

It is announced that no one wins the Great Cherry Race.

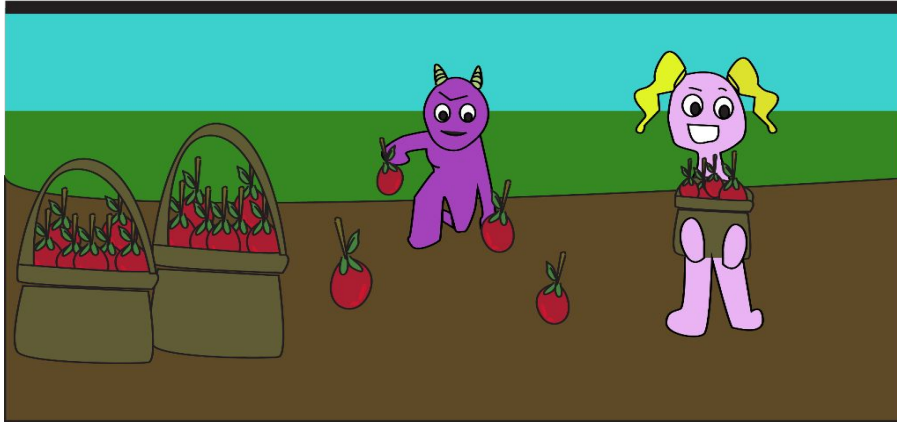

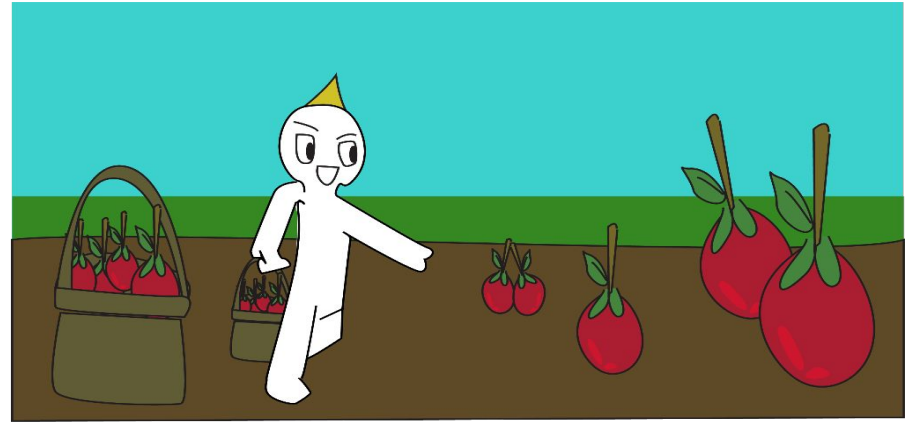

Boiboi, Ham and Penny begin blaming each other as they leave the race track.

As Boiboi is sitting all alone he notices that all the chibis, including himself were starving. Suddenly something catches his eyes.

The race track is still filled with cherries of all sizes. He knows what to do now.

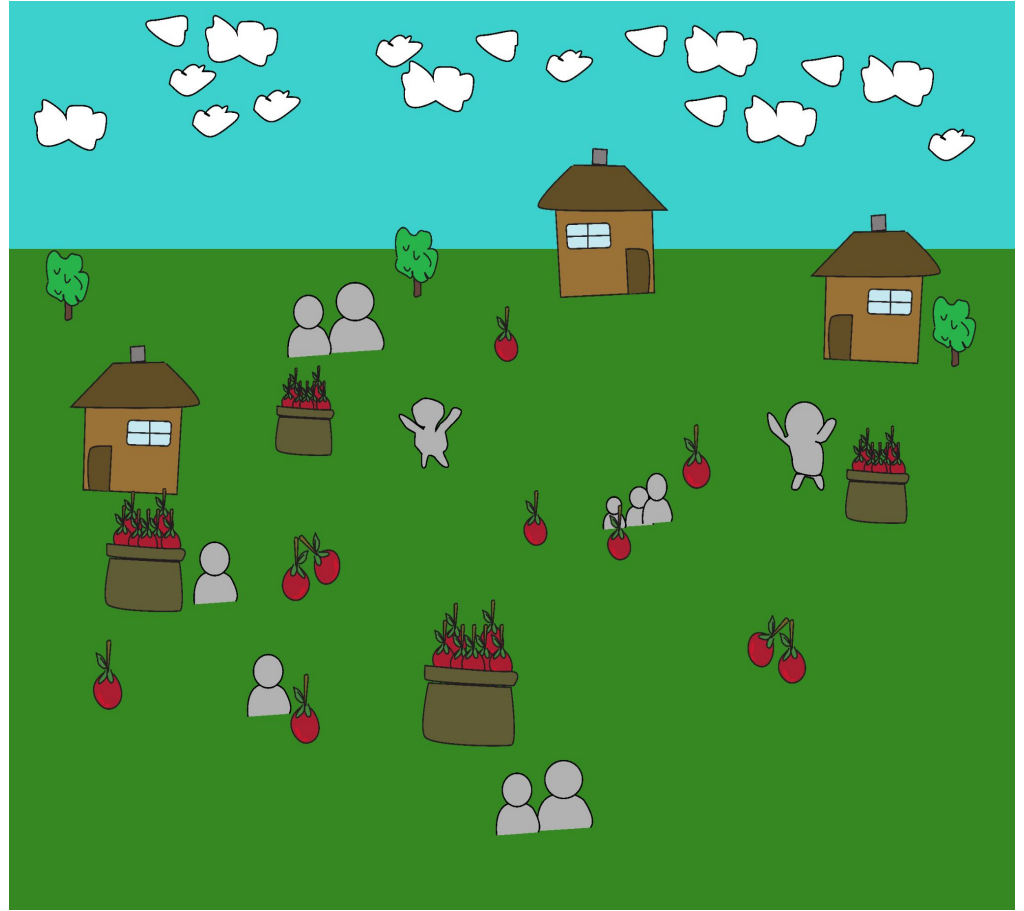

Boiboi uses his initiative and begins to collect all the cherries along the track and packs them into baskets.

Boiboi realises that everyone can still celebrate the harvest of the other cherries despite their size. Penny and Ham see him and follow his lead.

And of course, the entire village joins in.

Boiboi, Penny and Ham work together as a team to pick the different sized cherries and the rest of the village also help by bringing their baskets and filling them up with more cherries.

All the baskets of cherries put together are bigger than the one big cherry itself.

It was such an accomplishment by the entire village. Nothing could go wrong now.

Boiboi, Penny and Ham have reconciled and are now friends.

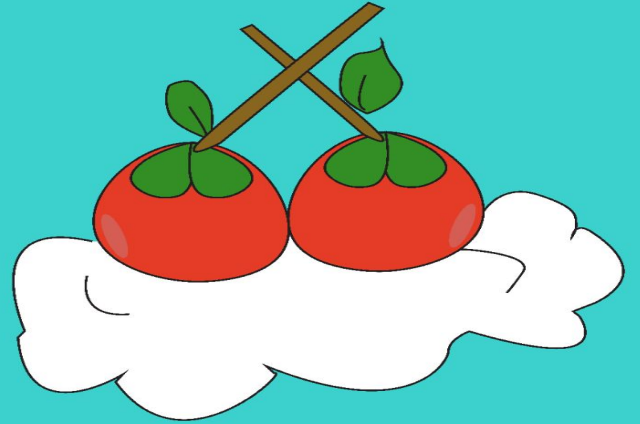

It turns out that the Great Cherry Day wasn't really over, the chibis just needed to do away with competing against each other. The village celebrated 'The Great Cherry Day' with their cherry-stuffed tummies.

Now everyone is happy and jolly!

Boiboi and the Great Cherry Day

This book is about a chibi named Boiboi who celebrates The Great Cherry Day and competes in a race to beat his two rivals for the biggest Cherry. Unfortunately, they disrupted the competition leaving the village upset.

Will Boiboi be able to make The Cherry Day great again?
