

Chloe Davis

Dreaming

Of

Colour

illustrations by Chloe Davis.

Can you find all the animals ?

5 ladybugs

4 parrots

6 red pandas

(1890) Louie was a photographer. He loved taking photos, he loved exploring the world around him. Sadly for Louie, he lived in a world without colour. Everyday he would take the same photos of the same grey streets that surrounded him.

One day, while Louie was walking the street, taking his photos, he came across a quaint little store that sold bric a brac. Louie found an extraordinary camera in a window and to his surprise he could afford it!

He walked inside the little shop and spoke to the owner and asked to buy the camera.

Louie took the camera and went outside.

He decided to take a photo of the streets and as he did so he saw something he had never seen before.

Colour!

As Louie looked at the photo he was transported to a place identical to the photo he had seen... the small brown bear rowing along the river next to him.

He yelled out to him. "Hey you over there!"

"Where am I, what is this place? I was just taking a photo of the grey streets and then I was teleported here."

The little brown bear said, "Hello there, my name is Benny. You must have found that camera. I also found that camera. You must be a photographer too."

Benny then pulled out his own camera to take a photo.

As soon as Benny took the photo, they were transported to a cold and windy terrain with snow surrounding them.

Benny and Louie were too cold to speak. They walked over to a small igloo they found when suddenly a small figure emerged from the icy house.

*As the figure got closer and closer they started calling out.
It was a polar bear. She told them to come inside the igloo where there were six cute little polar bears.*

The polar bear said, "Hi my name is Skylar and used to live in a grey street with no colour until I found a camera and I teleported to this beautiful place. The colour makes me so happy."

"It seems like everybody who picks up the camera teleports to different places around the world."

Suddenly a snowstorm knocked over the igloo and everything blew over.

Skylar told Louie, Benny, and the six kids to take cover underground.

The wind rushed through the air and the snow spread like a blanket over the little underground door.

The little bears were looking for a nice little spot to sit. Benny and Louie didn't think the underground house would be so inviting. There was a kitchen and a comfortable couch for them to sit on. The underground house was cosy and warm.

Skylar came over to Benny and Louie and handed them a slice of peach, stored from the last Spring, and told them that the snowstorm would be over soon enough.

After a few hours, Skylar opened the little underground door and was happy to find that the snowstorm had passed.

Skylar called out to Benny and Louie and once they got there Skylar climbed off the ladder so Louie and Benny could see for themselves.

After everyone climbed out of the little underground place, Skylar called her six kids to start looking around for all the bits and pieces that had blown away in the storm.

Benny and Louie pulled out their cameras because they wanted to go see the world. Skylar waved goodbye.

Louie and Benny held hands as they took a photo with the camera and transported to their next adventure!

Skylar knows that Benny and Louie are out there adventuring hoping that they will come back to visit some day in the future.....

Louie is an exquisite photographer who lives in a world with NO colour, but as he walks around the streets of his home town, he finds a camera that is more than the world can handle.

