

Emma to the Rescue

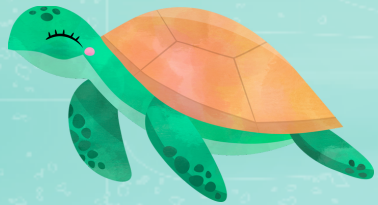

By Clodagh

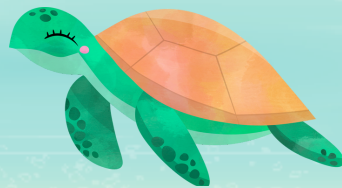

Dedication

This book is for my Nanny & Pa. They inspired me because they went to the beach and Pa fed the seagulls hot chips. That's why I wrote about baby turtles on the beach like they were on the beach.

One windy and sunny evening Emma and her family decided to have a stroll down to the beach. Not knowing what was going to happen.

Emma saw a huge turtle waddle up the sand as she ran closer and closer. Emma wondered why the turtle was waddling up the sand. She thought it might have little baby eggs and the turtle was going to check up on them.

Emma jogged closer and saw 10 eggs lying there in a big wide nest. She knew she had to do something to save them if they hatched and couldn't get to the water.

Emma thought we might have to save the baby eggs. She looked around the beach and saw a lot of disgusting rubbish just lying on the beach.

Why would people do that to the beach? It's the first time Emma has seen it that bad.

Emma started to clean up the dirty beach and as she picked up more and more in her mind she was thinking how can we save these turtles?

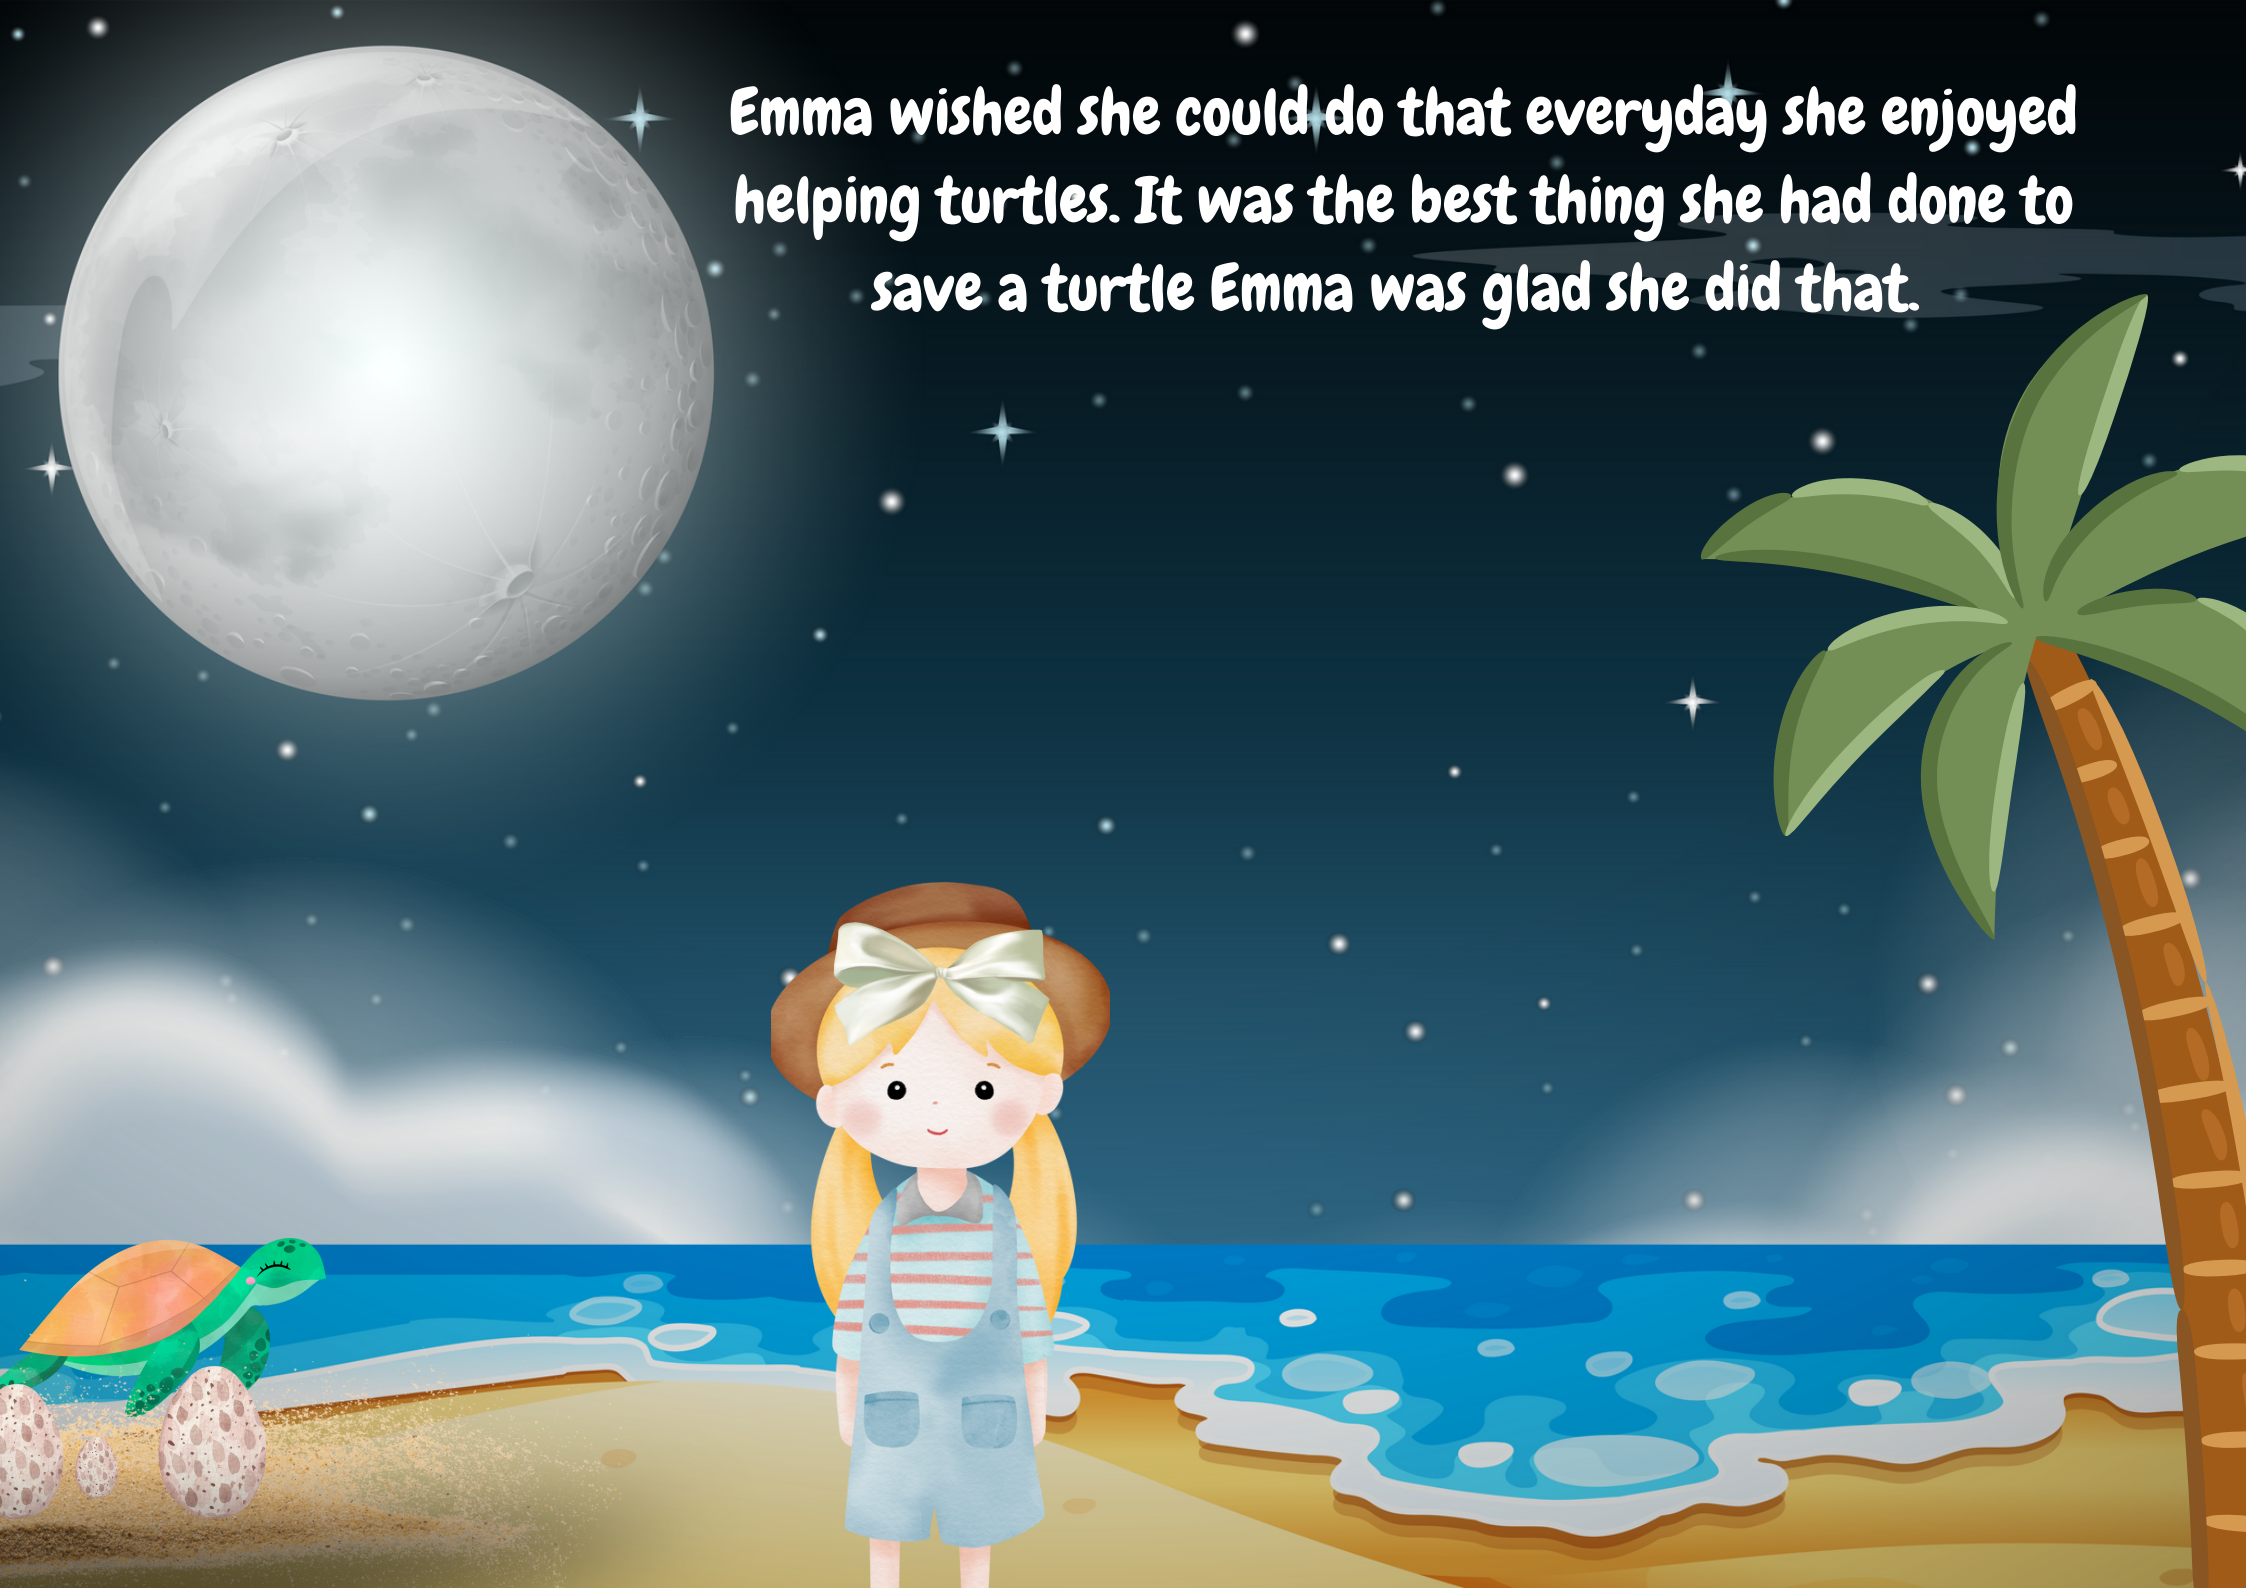

Emma's family was just watching her so she yelled at them "What are you doing just standing there? WHAT ARE YOU DOING?"

So she got them to help her and after 2 hours and 10 rubbish bags later it was done and finished and it was nearly 7:00pm.

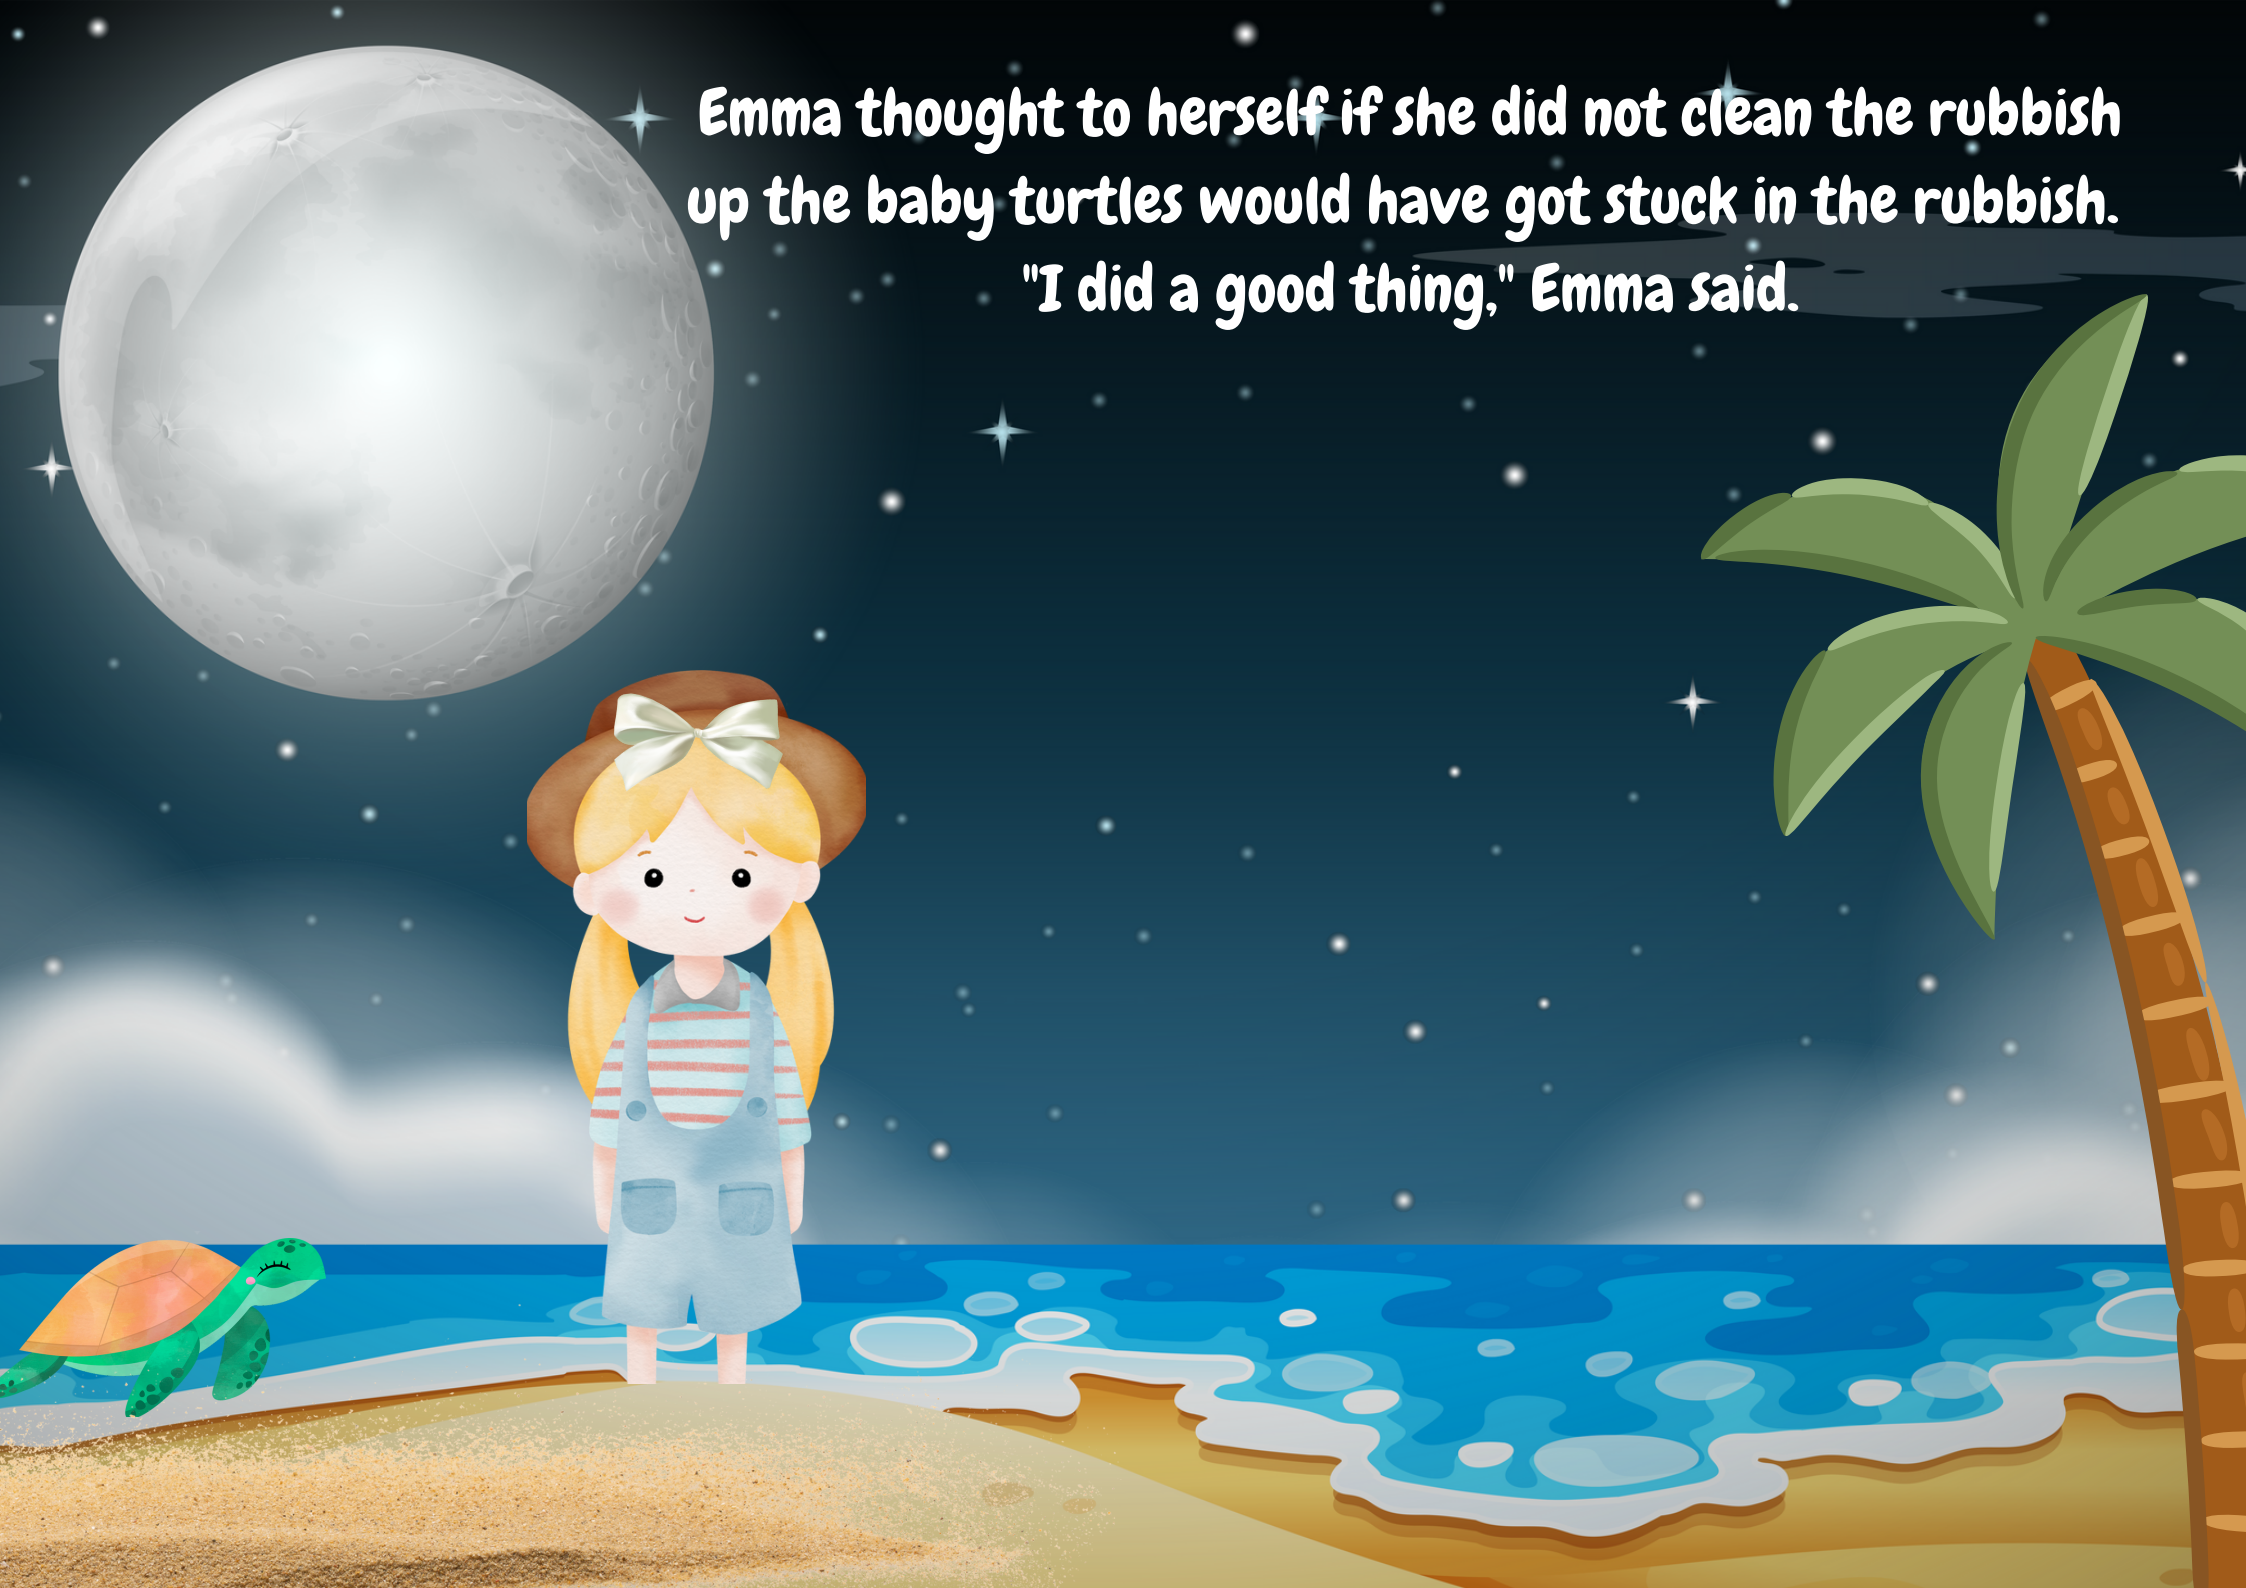

Emma wished she could do that everyday she enjoyed helping turtles. It was the best thing she had done to save a turtle Emma was glad she did that.

She walked closer to the nest and there saw the baby eggs hatching and waddling out of their nest. Emma watched then walk down the beach into the water.

Emma thought to herself if she did not clean the rubbish up the baby turtles would have got stuck in the rubbish.
"I did a good thing," Emma said.

It was the cutest thing Emma had seen that whole evening and she felt really proud of herself and family for cleaning up the beach. Emma and her family strolled back home wondering what adventures the turtles would go on next.
