I dedicate this book to my little brother Maximilian, my family,
my friends and kids from all over the world.

Once upon a time, there was a strong and handsome boy named John who lived in a wonderful city in Hawaii. He was very kind and friendly to his little brother William. John had brown hair, blue eyes and sandy beige skin tone. His little brother had black hair, green eyes, and light brown skin tone.

Hawaii is a beautiful state, and it has fifty-six famous sandy beaches. Thousands of tourists visit Hawaii every year. It also has the biggest amusement park in the world!

John and William moved to Hawaii with their family when they were two years old.

One day, John took William to the park to play. They played on swings, slid from the highest slides and had enormous fun on the seesaw. After a while, since William was tired, they rested for a little, yet William was insisting to go home as he wanted to watch tele.

On their way home,
William saw a coin on the pavement. When he touched it, he collapsed
on the ground unconsciously. John thought he was sleeping
so he shook William hard. Still William's eyes were shut tight.

John did not know what to do. His palms became damp, and his heart raced faster. John started to panic. He called an ambulance. The ambulance was supposed to arrive in 10 minutes, yet the streets were empty with deafening silence. John looked on both sides of the streets, however no one was there to help.

William was slowly losing his life. John checked the coin, and it looked ancient. He quickly retrieved his phone to snap a picture of the coin. He would show it to the doctors.

John carried William to the hospital. Once they got there the doctors immediately took William to emergency room. John did not know what he should do. His little brother was in a poor condition. He thought that William wouldn't make it.

A while later, a nurse approached John to take some details. John showed her the picture on his phone. The nurse confirmed John's worst fears. That it was not a coin at all, it was a venomous coin spider.

Finally, doctors came out with an excellent news. William fully recovered and was ready to go home. The tears of happiness rolled down on John's blushed cheeks. His little brother was safe and alive. From now on John will keep William safe from spiders and strange coins.
